It then got me thinking. Is there a tool that can protect you from an attacker using this method? I mean, if you tunnel traffic through SSH where they only send a small amount of data at a time to the server, say 2 bytes of an SSH handshake (length 32), then if you try to handle data coming through the tunnel, for example connect to then you need to wait 2 bytes for a confirmation that it is a legitimate connection, then 4 bytes
