What's New in the Cornerstone MFT?

The FTP server is the first step in securing the FTP protocol, because an intruder could potentially gain access to all of the information on your server through the FTP protocol. The FTP server is not as secure as it should be, because it requires a username and password to be used to gain access to the information. SFTP works in the same manner as FTP, except that it encrypts data to be sent. SSH File Transfer Protocol (SFTP) supports public key encryption, so the connection is secured using a pair of keys. If you choose to use Cornerstone's SSH File Transfer Protocol (SFTP) feature, then you will have the ability to administer both your existing FTP servers as well as your SSH servers in the same interface. This is much easier than having to manage different solutions for each service. The Cornerstone software is compatible with any file transfer protocol, and is designed for both Linux and Windows operating systems. Features: Advanced users will appreciate Cornerstone's ease of use, because the software is both simple and fast to use. Installation: The first step in setting up the FTP Server in Cornerstone is to install the FTP server in the web server environment. Cornerstone FTP server is web server independent, so no additional software needs to be installed. Cornerstone supports FTP server downloads for every supported operating system. After the FTP server is installed, you will be asked to log in and enter the FTP server password. After the FTP server is set up and the user is logged in, Cornerstone will be ready for use. The FTP server can be accessed from any Internet browser. On The Go: To be able to access your FTP server on the go, you will need to download the Cornerstone software. The Cornerstone software comes in one file, a run-time engine that is about the same size as the FTP Server software. A simple download of Cornerstone and your FTP server software will have the two programs ready to use. Administration: The Cornerstone software is very easy to use, and is designed to be used by administration and regular users alike. Administrators can easily make changes to the FTP server settings, including changing the FTP server username and password, as well as adding users. The FTP server settings can be set in the administration area of Cornerstone. For novice users, Cornerstone includes an administration tool with the software. The administration tool is fairly easy to use, and allows you to make changes, such as adding and deleting users, changing their passwords, and viewing current user statistics. Reporting: Cornerstone's FTP server software can be used to create reports. The report can be sent to any FTP server. The reports can be created using the Cornerstone software interface, or downloaded to your computer for further use.
