I own five.Q: Dynamically changing jquery toolTip I am using jQuery to show the tooltip on particular elements but I want to be able to dynamically change the tooltip, based on what element i am hovering over. I have a dropdown list with a variable number of options in it, and i want to be able to show the tooltips on the elements that have a data-title attribute of one of the options in the dropdown. I don't want to have to write a seperate tooltip function for each option in the dropdown, as there could be a lot of different options. When i do it, all tooltips appear on all elements at once. How can i make it so the tooltip is only displayed when it is relevant? For example, if i choose a value from my dropdown list like this: One Two Three The tooltips should appear on all elements with a data-title attribute of value 2, but only for a short amount of time. A? here's an example of using a non-function jquery object in my place of how you could do it, should be pretty easy to adapt
