After you finish editing an image, the EXIF (Exchangeable Image File Format) data about the image is retained, so if you print the image and the person later asks for that file, you can send it to him or her. As an added bonus, you can protect the original file by installing the original EXIF metadata. Simply enter this command to turn on the option to save EXIF data: * Exposure Histogram: * Picture Mode: `Auto` or another selected mode. * Color Mode: Select from RGB, CMYK, Grayscale, Index, or Greyscale. * Compression: `JPEG Fine` or `JPEG Basic` (see Chapter 8 for more about compression and anti-aliasing). * Resolution: The size of the original file. * Camera Model: This option makes Adobe Photoshop read the manufacturer's information about the camera's technical characteristics. It is grayed out by default, so no information appears when you open the dialog box for a new image. You can also save additional EXIF data. Select File⇒Save As⇒Save For Web and Device, and then select a location. This feature is described in more detail on the next pages. To display the EXIF data in a small window, select View⇒Expert Settings⇒Photoshop Elements from the main menu or press Ctrl+K (⌘-K). Choose Auto from the pop-up menu at the top of the dialog box. This setting is turned on by default, so no information appears.

Q: How to retrieve PHP array into javascript variable? I have an array of elements whose values I would like to use to populate a form. I am trying to do this using Jquery. $('#btn').click(function() { var elements = myArray[1]; var elements2 = myArray[2]; } Button 1 Unfortunately this does not work. The only way I've managed to get the PHP array into the javascript array is using this... $('#btn').click(function() { var elements = ""; var elements2 = ""; } But that's obviously not going to work as the PHP code is running at the server and not at the browser. A: Ajax to get it:

$('#btn').click(function() { $.ajax({ url : 'test.php', data : { 'act' : 1, 'obj' : 1,'myArray' : myArray }, success : function(res){ var elements = res.data['1']; var elements2 = res.data['2']; } }); }
