Progressive loss of spermatogenesis is a major cause of male infertility. In humans, reduced rates of spermatogenesis are detected in approximately 20% of infertile men. Although the etiology of the majority of cases of male infertility remains unknown, genetic factors are known to influence spermatogenesis. The purpose of this study was to identify the genes involved in sexual development and spermatogenesis that may be useful for developing animal models of spermatogenic impairment. We have analyzed the gene expression profiles of mouse testes at several different stages of spermatogenesis using two-color cDNA microarrays. The expression profiles of testes were compared with those of testes from a model mouse strain that shows spermatogenic arrest at the pachytene stage of meiotic prophase I. Male mice of strain C57BL/6J, which show spermatogenic arrest at the pachytene stage of meiotic prophase I, and female mice of strain C57BL/6J were generated by crossing male heterozygotes and female homozygotes. The gene expression profile of the testis of the C57BL/6J mice was compared with that of the C57BL/6J x CBA/J F1 mice, and genes with a statistically significant difference in expression level were identified. We suggest that 19 of the 722 genes, which showed a statistically significant difference in expression level between C57BL/6J and C57BL/6J x CBA/J F1 testes, could be considered to be associated with spermatogenic impairment. Furthermore, in the genes showing a statistically significant difference in expression level between C57BL/6J and C57BL/6J x CBA/J F1 testes, 20 of the 71 genes were identified that showed a significant difference in expression level with castration. These gene expressions were observed in C57BL/6J mice, but not in CBA/J mice. The genes were related to the progression of spermatogenesis and the maintenance of the histone-to-protamine transition in the nucleus. The results indicated that a large number of genes in the testes were expressed in a sexually dimorphic manner. We suggest that the genes,

By using tracer dilution techniques, we have shown that the principal cause of the dysgenic nipple in women with primary Sjögren's syndrome is a defective lactiferous ductal secretion. Since a similar chloride transport defect also exists in adult rats, we studied the ion transport characteristics of the human nipple in order to determine whether there is a similar defect in the fluid secreted by the human breast. This nipple fluid was obtained by nipple aspiration, and its chloride concentration was determined by ion-specific electrode measurements. The chloride concentration in this nipple fluid was 0.9 mmol/l. In a second series of experiments, the chloride concentration was measured in human nipple aspirate fluid after an iv injection of chloride-free saline. The chloride concentration in this nipple fluid was 0.28 mmol/l. Moreover, both the basal and maximal chloride secretory response to isoproterenol were studied in the secretory response to the combination of isoproterenol and an iv injection of acetylcholine in the same nipple. In the presence of 10(-9) mol/l isoproterenol, the basal chloride secretion rose from 0.03 mmol/l to a maximal value of 0.48 mmol/l. In the presence of 10(-5) mol/l acetylcholine, the isoproterenol-stimulated chloride secretory response fell from 0.5 mmol/l to a maximal value of 0.26 mmol/l. We conclude that the human nipple is not protected against a chloride deficit in the ductal secretory pathway. to the cash: dog food, dog toys, dog gear, treats, and that big yellow kennel in the backyard. So sayeth the presidential candidate of the Democratic Party, President Obama, and they should be punished in three ways: First, peace with the Palestinians should be implemented with the blessing of the whole world. The terrorist camp of Hamas in Gaza gives the clearest proof that this cannot be done. Until such time as the Palestinians agree to the establishment of a Palestinian state on the 1967 borders, they have no real interest in peace - which would be the only way in which they could enjoy the prospect of a settled life. The latter requirement has to be made from now on by the Palestinian state. The renunciation of terrorism has to become a keystone of any Palestinian political agreement, and Israel has to make sure that Gaza is transparent to the international community, so that Hamas can't pretend to harbor weapons and terror leaders. Second, Obama and his administration should advocate that the Palestinians do a sharp turn, and make peace with the Jewish state. Israel deserves not just respect, but also cooperation in security. The Jewish state is a democracy and a guarantee for international peace. The Palestinian state will be a terrorist state from the very start, and Israel should do everything it can to cooperate with it in this status. The Palestinians will no longer be able to claim that they need to annihilate Israel before they can be happy again. Third,
