The story is usually pretty good. Pages Sunday, 10 August 2015 I Love My iPad. I love my iPad. It's all thanks to an old friend, the iPhone SE. Now, I am not the type of person to share a good thing with anyone, let alone a 12 pound fluffy teddy bear. But somehow, Facebook has managed to convince me that sharing is caring. My friends were debating whether or not they should go for the SE. I had no experience of anything other than an iPhone 4, which to be honest did a pretty good job and really didn't need anything else. I knew the iPad had come out. I knew it was the future of technology, and I also knew that I would probably give it a try. So to my surprise the iPad had actually been used a few times by one of my friends. The good side to the iPad is that I actually like to use it. I have a good idea of how it works, and without the need to understand the larger aspects it's easy to use. The bad side is that it's a pain in the ass to carry around. Not only that, but the keyboard is a little daunting. I know there are alternatives, but the number of people I know who actually use them because they are actually better than a keyboard is pretty low. As far as the Apple ecosystem goes, the Apple watch was my first real experience with it. I loved that I could just set it on my wrist and just have that little piece of tech (which was also pretty light) to carry around with me. It was a battery hog, though. But it had a very simple interface to use. When I first came across the iPad SE, I actually liked the idea of it. I was a little sceptical about the screen size, but I was willing to give it a shot. I wasn't disappointed. The size seemed perfect for doing things on the go. I couldn't make this kind of writing on the screen of the iPhone 4S though. I then came across the Apple Pencil. Now, if the screen size was just the size of a tablet (it's not, it's a little bit smaller), then how could you actually use the screen on your fingers. On the paper of course 0cc13bf012
