There are two very good introductory books on using Photoshop: * A Hands-On Guide to Adobe Photoshop Elements and Photoshop CS, 2nd Edition by Julien Delahaye, offers new photographers an introduction to Photoshop for photo editing. The book is geared to beginners (especially those using Elements) and is full of useful tutorials.

This book uses the Photoshop CS format. *

The Photoshop CS for Photographers book by Michael G. Perry and Amy C. Bruni is for those who want to jump-start their digital photo editing journey. This book covers simple editing techniques like cropping, rotating, resizing, and enhancing images to help photographers who are new to Photoshop get started. The book focuses more on the new features in Photoshop CS2 than past versions. Adobe Photoshop's Tutorial Center Adobe has quite a few tutorials on its website for Photoshop CS6 and the Adobe Creative Suite. They are intended to give users the skills to use Adobe Photoshop to create and modify images. Although these tutorials are not designed to be complete, they should help readers get started using Photoshop to create images. You can find the tutorials listed in the table "Create a Photo"

Photoshop, the first thing that comes to mind is probably not painting. But Photoshop includes more than a bucketload of painting tools to help you make beautiful images.

You can use them individually or in combination with each other to create a variety of effects. Although Photoshop doesn't automatically paint in the traditional sense, it does include a number of tools that enable you to paint — including adding color and shading to an image. You also find tools for crop, resize, and apply other special effects such as gradients, bevels, and embossing. As part of the Creative Suite, Photoshop is fully integrated with Adobe's line of Adobe Design software products, including Dreamweaver and InDesign. As a result, you can use the same tools to crop, resize, and modify images in other software as you can in Photoshop. You can use Paint, Camera Raw, and other tools to perform basic editing tasks, and you can take

‘If you want to see the best in tennis, you need to watch Nadal’ – Djokovic

Novak Djokovic (left) and Alexander Zverev have had a somewhat lacklustre first round match at the Australian Open on Saturday afternoon.

Novak Djokovic has said that if you want to see the best in tennis, you need to watch Rafael Nadal. Australia's top-ranked doubles player also took a swipe at Alexander Zverev after their dour opening singles match on Saturday. Djokovic and Zverev narrowly won 6-7 (3), 6-7 (7), 7-6 (4) as the players shared a flat opening set on Rod Laver Arena. "I don't know, I don't have any opinion on that. You have to watch him,” Djokovic said when asked about his fellow Serb. Djokovic went on to win the opening set after Zverev took almost half an hour to serve for the match. “He’s an excellent player. “If you want to see the best in tennis, you need to watch Rafael Nadal.” Djokovic and Zverev eventually had an 11th tie-break, after they had five in the opening set. The world number one took the second set after Zverev had twice dropped his serve before winning the decisive set at the final tie-break. “Tough for me today. Tough conditions,” said Zverev, who won the title at the French Open in May. “Maybe I should have won. Maybe I should have been better in that tiebreak.”

"Maybe I should have been better. "I couldn't find a way to win this one. I think the conditions played in my favour in the second set." This will be the first major final meeting between the pair. "Yes, it's going to be the first final. That's pretty much it," Djokovic said. "How we're going to play, I have no idea. We'll see what happens. "It's another final. We have population clustering? 4. What is the distribution of infected plants (given spatial clustering) as a function of time? Is the distribution different for each type of plant (hanging baskets, potted plants, or trees)? If so, how? 5. Assume a population of infected Ceratitis capitata adults emerge at night, each one flies 2 m, and die without dispersing. Ask yourself how this process will change the location and spatial structure of the viral infections throughout the year.

(File) Congress vice-president Rahul Gandhi said on Friday that the Congress would formally announce its next president after the resignation of party chief Sonia Gandhi and the selection of the vice-president. With Congress leaders angry at the manner in which the party chief was removed and blamed the BJP for stalling democracy, Rahul Gandhi said he had received a request to quit from a section of party workers and supporters. “The Congress is not a suicide club. No, we will not resign. We will announce the president and vice-president after we complete our activities. I have received a request to quit from some of the party workers and supporters,” he told reporters. The Congress is divided between those who want to go back to the “successful methods” of the Indira Gandhi era and the new generation, he said. “Sonijaji has achieved an incredible lot with Prime Minister [Narendra Modi]. My job is to assist Sonijaji, to guide and take the party along the path she has laid out. I will do it. We all have to do it. But we all know the BJP is trying to hijack the Congress party. The BJP feels Soniaji is not strong enough and they want to destroy her. They want to gain political power. And we will not allow that," Rahul Gandhi said.
