I have a class, that wraps a serializable object and I need to send it over the network. This class also wraps a class of mine, called Amount, which I can Serialize myself to JSON. The problem is that on the receiving end I need to know how to deserialize/reconstruct the Amount class. I did not have the luck of finding a class that does that for me, so I had to write a very simple deserializer. But I found that although it was easy to write, it still gave me some headaches when debugging. Is there anything simpler that I'm missing? My class is something like this: class Wrapper(price:Amount) And I used this little class to serialize/deserialize: class JsonSerializer { private var serializer:JSONSerializer = JSONSerializer() function serialize(delegate:Wrapper) :String { var obj = new JsonObject(); obj.set("price", delegate.price.toJson()); obj.toJson() } function deserialize(json:String) :Wrapper { var obj = new JsonObject(); obj.fromJson(json); e79caf774b

COMSOL Multiphysics v4.3b v4.3.2.152.Q: Chrome notification sounds are not played when minimized When browsing, I can listen to a browser notification (for example, if I'm viewing a youtube video and get a notification) by clicking on the icon or by the volume button on the player, but when I switch the browser window to minimized mode, or even just close the tab, the notification stops being played, although it still remains in the background (still appearing as a notification). Is there any way to make it be played regardless of the browser view, window, or tab state? A: This is probably because of the different states of the browser. Minimizing the browser means that you're getting rid of the entire UI state of the browser (tab contents and whatnot). A 'paused' state of a tab means that the tab (i.e. all the contents in it) has been moved into a separate UI state (e.g. a separate window). You can change the tab type to something else than'mini', for example 'full' (not entirely sure if there's a difference in semantics, but all I know is that you're getting the entire tab contents now) to make it 'paused' in the background. The new patient group of Ikaria Organic Health Center and Therapy includes adults who are looking to enhance their health and vitality with the services and products found at Ikaria. Ikaria features sustainable living, organic gardens, and farm, and uses products from local farms, found in the world's oldest standing aquaria in Greece. The center is named Ikaria because it is located on the island of Ikaria, a private island in the Aegean Sea. It
