The carrier did not announce any information about a specific date for the launch, but said that the spacecraft will undergo final on-ground testing and launch preparations in the coming months. India's Geosynchronous Satellite Launch Vehicle Mark III rocket blasted off from the Satish Dhawan Space Centre in Sriharikota, on the eastern coast of the Indian sub-continent, at 4.15am (1215 UTC) on Thursday, the Indian Space Research Organisation (Isro) said. The three-stage rocket carrying GSAT-6A, the first foreign military satellite for the Indian armed forces, blasted off at an altitude of about 622 km and an inclination of over 51 deg eastward. The 5-metre tall rocket reached an orbit of around 36,000 km above the earth and took about five and a half hours to complete its journey, the Isro said. "Spent rocket stages, payload fairing and the remote sensing satellite GSAT-6A have been separated from the booster and are travelling along the planned orbit," said the space agency. "The remote sensing satellite is now live." "A communication link between GSAT-6A and the space vehicle is established," the statement added. The satellite was developed by the Isro's Satellite Centre in Bangalore, under the radar imaging and surveillance programme named Pratyush. India is aiming to be the second-largest global space power by the end of the next decade after catching up with China, the world's biggest space player, in the field of satellite launches. The United States and Japan currently lead the global race for space. China has also been making a strong push in the rapidly expanding market. Copyright 2016 Robert Winkler, IBM Corp.  This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify * it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by * the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, e79caf774b
