Polysaccharide complexes of ginseng products.. The main discussion of the 2010 Pharmacopoeia related to raw materials and bulk commodities, both inThe present invention relates generally to the field of equipment or system interface controller systems, and more particularly to the real time control of equipment or system interface controllers. In a variety of equipment or system applications, there is a need for a configurable and/or updatable controller for controlling a plurality of peripheral devices or systems. However, the control of these devices or systems is extremely difficult due to the number of possible configurations for the various devices or systems, and the differing methods of operation associated therewith. Further, it is desirable to keep the number of external control lines to a minimum, and to operate these devices or systems in a manner that will not cause interference with other systems or devices that are in the same environmental temperature or is a radiative environment. Further, when a remote controller is used to control the devices or systems, it is desirable to provide a means of providing a diagnostic or programming capability, and of updating such controls. It is also desirable to have a ready means of correcting errors or providing replacement parts.

Additionally, in such applications, it is desirable to have a real time interface with the individual devices or systems so that configuration and/or programming may occur without the need to shut down the equipment or system being controlled. Further, it is desirable to have a real time interface to provide remote control capabilities to maintain the equipment or system being controlled as a closed loop system. Also, in such applications, it is desirable to provide a means of providing redundancy for such systems to insure against equipment or system failure. Further, it is desirable to have a controller which is capable of interfacing with a processor having a plurality of input and output terminals, and a plurality of lines to pass input and output information between the processor
