page 339 famine Food production on a nationwide level is having a large and detrimental impact on the people in Haiti. The majority of Haitians have no access to regular, nutritious food, and in some instances if food is able to be produced in large enough quantities the social and economic factors that cause hunger in Haitians are further exacerbated. This could be due to Haiti's weak economy, lack of healthy soil or a combination of factors. Food subsidies and other aid programs help to alleviate this issue but because of the highly dependent nature of this nation as well as the fact that Haitian social and economic structure is lacking many Haitians are unable to produce even the most basic of commodities (such as using a tractor to grow crops, etc.). STUDY COMPLETED BY: BY HAITI DESERT PROJECT RECORDING DATE: 14-02-2013 TIME: 11:05 AM File: awf2ca_3011.jpg HAITIAN DIASPORAS HAITIAN DIASPORAS When Haiti was in a state of uprising; in the early 19th century, the concept of diasporas, or descendant ethnic groups, was central to the minority's racial interpretation of Haitian history. The enslaved African race was thus perceived as having been manipulated through the desire of its leaders to establish a nation, Haiti, to which the descendants of African slaves would be repatriated for labor and spiritual inspiration. The conferees, believing in a future rebirth for the Haitian, made indentured servitude an integral part of the new constitution. The founders declared: "Today we need all of the colored races...we must promote [and] assure the economic, political and intellectual development of this race in order to fulfill our future destiny." The passage of the constitution perpetuated the 19th-century's socialist' vision of a biracial nation. As a result of this vision, the child of mother and slave man were deemed fit replacements for France's republican army. Neither the framers of the Constitution nor the Haitian legislature could have foreseen the full weight of the diasporas' participation in the revolution. The foreign-born workers, who had the greatest interest in the rights and welfare of their descendants back home, also provided the most capable artisans, laborers and soldiers. The diasporas' reticence to accept that they were just as Haitian as the whites had ever been did much to destroy the budding nation. In the 6d1f23a050
