It is an extended abstract of the talk of the author at the 15th International Conference on Automata, Languages, and Programming (ICALP 2012), held at Montréal, Canada, August 22-26, 2012. The key result proved is a connection between the effective L-substitution and Turing universality, namely, that the effective L-substitution captures all the operations that can be simulated by one-counter machines. The connection between effective L-substitution and Turing universality was already known by Fagin *et al.* [DBLP:conf/csr/0001FCDHL12]. This paper provides a different proof of this connection. As a corollary, we can show that the effective L-substitution is equivalent to a natural variant of the Büchi acceptance condition for Buchi automata. bibliography: - 'bib.bib' - 'thesis.bib'
