Visualization.[Leukoagglutinating antibodies in the diagnosis of primary immunodeficiency diseases in children and their families].
Leukoagglutinating antibodies (LAB) were determined in the sera of the family members of 134 patients (56 children and 78 adults) who developed hemophagocytic syndrome as well as in the sera of 157 healthy individuals. LAB were adults who had LAB. LAB were more frequently detected in the sera of patients with primary immunodeficiency diseases (PID), subarachnoid bleeding and prolonged neutropenia. Data on LAB of the family members of PID patients showed a definite dependence of the first degree kinship in the occurrence of this phenomenon. LAB were not detected in the sera of the healthy donors. The possibility of PID in persons with LAB should be considered when the relationship between a child and her/
