The downloader provides a convenient way to handle local file downloading. Adding a file You start your downloader by calling the download() method of a Downloader instance, passing a filename and a download_store to indicate where you would like the downloaded file to be saved. downloader = Downloader.download("content.zip") You can also pass a destination directory to save the downloaded file in and a flag to indicate whether or not the file should be decompressed. When the downloader is done, it will call on_download_complete(). When your downloader has completed, you can save the resulting file to disk. downloader.save("content.zip", "content.zip", save_in_zip=False) You can also call save() directly to save the file in any way you wish. downloader.save(filename, save_in_zip=False) Note that saving a file multiple times will invalidate the downloader's state. You can also cancel the download by setting a flag to True. downloader.cancel() Getting files c6a93da74d
